Healthy Food Database

The Healthy Food Policy Project (HFPP) identifies and elevates local laws that seek to promote access to healthy food while also contributing to strong local economies, an improved environment, and health equity, with a focus on socially disadvantaged and marginalized groups.

Recently, they released their Policy Database. The HFPP Policy Database focuses on written laws and organizational policies that have been formally adopted by municipal governments such as counties, cities, towns, and villages. These include ordinances, resolutions, and codified laws. The Policy Database does not include laws and policies adopted by school boards, park boards, and other types of special local governments. The Database also does not include state, federal, or Tribal laws; these types of governments are very different from municipal governments, with different structures and different priorities.

Although excluded laws and policies may have relevance to healthy food access in some way and may be important, they either did not expressly articulate a connection to healthy food access or expressed a connection but did not include enforceable or specific duties or requirements. Many of these types of laws are included in their Food System Crosswalk. Click here to access their database.

Rethink Your Drink Day Update

Due to the evolving situation with COVID-19, as well as guidance from the Governor’s Office and the office of California Department of Public Health Director Sonia Angell, CDPH is cancelling Rethink Your Drink Day (RYDD) 2020. CDPH is encouraged agencies to place orders for the Rethink Your Drink

Day event box and to store and receive the materials for a possible healthy beverage promotion after the pandemic has passed. The last day to order the event box was March 31, 2020. Click here to access the website for resources.

CATCH Health at Home

With schools across the country closing due to the novel Coronavirus (COVID-19), it's important to keep kids engaged, healthy, and active at home. CATCH Global Foundation has assembled a free set of lessons and resources to help teachers continue to provide health education, nutrition education and physical activity instruction to their students remotely.
