Richard A. Rawson, Ph.D., is an internationally renowned addiction researcher and has led addiction research and training projects for the United Nations, the World Health Organization, the Drosos Foundation and the U.S. State Department. He is Co-Director of UCLA Integrated Substance Abuse Programs, as well as Professor-in-Residence at the UCLA Department of Psychiatry.

In light of health care reform, health systems are beginning to recognize the importance of whole-person care, including addressing substance use disorders (SUD). In this special lecture, Dr. Rawson will discuss the transformation of SUD service delivery into a more organized system of care, and the potential of this change for communities, patients, and providers.
